June 7th, 2020 - this is a superb breakdown of American independent cinema that concentrates on the last two decades and covers key themes of industry involvement, genre, form, narrative, and social and political vision. The author looks at a range of indie types from ultra-low budget to more mainstream fare as well as looking at the films of directors such as Lynch, Soderbergh, the Coen brothers, etc.

March 4th, 2020 - the American independent sector has attracted much attention in recent years. An upsurge of academic work on the subject being accompanied by wider public debate. But many questions remain about how exactly independence should be defined and how its relationship might be understood with other parts of the cinematic landscape, most notably the Hollywood studios.

American independent cinema often called indie cinema has no clear historical starting point and no single definition. Most broadly, the term refers to films made outside the mainstream Hollywood system. The films of Andy Warhol and advanced film production workshop at the University of Wisconsin Madison are examples. He also published among many articles two "American independent cinema" and "Cinema and Media Studies."
